CHAPTER III.—DONALD'S HIDING PLACE.
Donald ran till the Poor Farm was out of sight; he did not turn to see, but he knew the hill he had run up was from the town. He didn't run so far through the town, but ran around the base of the long sloping hill till he reached the river bank, thinking that he might find a place to hide. He found a good shelter, for a dozen yards up the bank lay the oddest little craft he'd ever seen. It was evidently a deserted flat-boat, with a rude shed built on, and its windows were fast broken. A thin line of smoke curling up out of the pile of slopings at the side, told that it was inhabited, but there was no sign of anybody about. Donald found out these particulars by degrees; at first he dodged back behind the hill and peeped out now and then to reconnoiter.

His one object now was a place to hide, and the more he looked at the boat the more he thought that with that place, besides the water, there was not much to be had beyond the town. He crept cautiously up to the boat, and as he stood considering he heard a shout. That settled matters. In less time than it took to tell he had crept down between the banks and boxes, making himself as small as possible.

But it was only a coasting party of about a dozen boys and two girls, one of whom pulled a little box sled, which as usual was pulled by a small, half-grown, half-checked youngster. The boys had all sorts of sleds from a long coaster like Crawford's elegant "Prize-Chapter," sled to a board nailed across two sticks. And the two girls sat silent down on the hill and the noise they made about it was a caution.

Donald put up his hand to pull an old piece of carpet about him, but jerked it back in a hurry when the canoe came in. He had to pull it back again, and then back again, and so on, making himself as small as possible.

And what a bright face it was that pressed itself against the pane, full of life and fun, and out in it was a funny face, that Donald had looked at before he knew what he was about. It was one of those bright, pleasant faces that always make people smile and feel good-natured, and the two girls had such faces, and they were as they caught sight of the boys and girls.

"Oh, Janet, Babette, come quick! see Lu-an' Betty's new sled! It's got a seat in it, an' a place to draw by a rope if you don't want to slide. Ain't it a elegant sled?"

WHY WE CAVE THANKS
—GOOD TIMES AHEAD.

Draw not so greedily flagons of sorrow,
We're every biter less temper'd with sweet;
We're every biter less temper'd with sorrow,
Flowers and natties are both at your feet.

Who that hath looked on the plumbum grain,
The golden grain, the golden grain,
God sends the healthful life-giving rain,

Both are for mewy and elegant sated.

Strive to be happy whatever your station,

Like the old man, the old man, the old man,

Pride makes a poor man to stand and sticke,

Keeps his head in the wearisome woe,

What a woe, what a woe, what a woe,

All of his burdens would vanish in smoke.

Who would not rather inhabit a palace,

Though humbler than many of which we could

Thus we're drinking of poverty's chalice?

Put by your evenings and pay the piper,

Let us be happy, though we may be poor,

Hand-painted platters of turkey went round,

Yesterdays' news, to-morrows' news, to-day,

None on your table by neighbors were found.

Raises up your children to love of the beautiful,

Teach them to value refinement, you can

Make a bright home by the installment plan.

In a bright home by the installment plan,

Christmas is coming with frost, hand and fury,

Get up a bright home by the installment plan,

What you need now and be in a hurry,

Mac has to sell his odd wares.

An exile in San Remo, the Crown Prince thinks with affection of Berlin. "You must tell the people of Berlin," he said recently to Mr. Bismarck, who is at San Remo, "how deeply grateful I am to them for all their tokens of sympathy."

Mr. Bismarck said that never had the people loved the Crown Prince as now.

"There is a moment of," said the Prince. He then said that as hoped soon to be able to return to the Fatherland, and was going on to speak of other things when an official interfered and reminded him that silence was necessary. The Prince obeyed. His obedience is what doctors protest most. It is said that for some days no newspapers have been admitted to Villa Zirio, that Dr. Mackenzie has forbidden it, and that the Prince is allowed to read nothing of current interest, except a short summary of political news.

MADRID IN AN UPROAR.

Thousands of People Visit a Wounded Bull-Fighter.—A Remarkable Scene.

Special Cablegram from Post-Dispatch.

MADRID, November 26.—One of the best bull-fights of the season, for, of course, Easteride is bull-fighting day par excellence, took place on Sunday. Eight men with lances and picks had done their torturing work and the great moment came when Trasceulo, the celebrated espadrille, sprang into the ring. The bull, fatigued and tormented, had no opportunity to deal a clean death-stroke at him, burying his horns in the abdomen of his persecutor. Despite the terrible agony from the wound Trasceulo did not lose his presence of mind for an instant, and with one thrust killed the bull. The next moment he fell unconscious and was carried behind the barriers. It was announced that he was mortally wounded, but the audience did not turn a hair or drop a tear, and demanded fresh bulls and a new espadrille.

"The king is dead, long live the king."

While the audience was cheering the new bull-fighter, Francisco, who had started for his home, where the physicians pronounced his wounds serious but not necessarily fatal. After all the bulls had been killed, the audience awoke from its blood-thirstiness and then occurred a scene such as only Madrid is capable of producing, and "Quien no ha visto, no ha visto maravilla." 30,000 people rushed around to Trasceulo's house, and demanded that the wounded brave should himself. The doctors refused to permit. The people became uproarious and fearing that the wound was fatal, Trasceulo, who had drawn his bright blade for the last time, demanded to be admitted to his room to visit him and assist him as far as his condition. This was permitted and the tremendous gathering reassured as to its favorite's fate formed in line and marched through his house, leaving their cards. The line kept up five hours, and that evening 11,000 cards were left on the hall table. Among the callers were grandees, members of Sagasta's Cabinet, and prominent deputies.

Death of Mrs. C. S. Reinhardt-Blaine.—The Coming Salon.

Special Cablegram from Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, November 26.—The death of Mrs. C. S. Reinhardt, wife of the American artist of that name, and sister of Mr. Eugene Varens of New York, occurred Thursday at her residence, No. 42 Rue Pruny. Mrs. Reinhardt belonged to an old French family which emigrated from Hayst at the time of the revolution, and settled in New York. Mrs. Reinhardt was quite a young woman and a great favorite in Paris among a large circle of friends.

THE BLAINES.

Mr. Blaine and his family will leave early next week for the Riviera to spend the winter months. They will be present at the Pope's jubilee in Rome in January. Mrs. Blaine's health has not improved since her stay here. Mr. Blaine spends most of the day in his study. He frequents the American reading-rooms, and takes great interest in New York papers, but has avoided any discussions on the subject of American politics, even with personal friends. Owing to his persistent refusal to see the representatives of a certain New York newspaper, imaginary interviews and false reports of his movements have been manufactured here and cables to America.

WILL MARRY A MARQUIS.

The engagement of Miss Rose Buckingham of Chicago to a young French Marquis is rumored.

THE COMING SALON.

Preparations for the coming salon among the American artists are very active. Most of the colony will be represented there next spring. Last year one-third of the pictures exhibited were by American artists. Among others to be exhibited at this coming Exposition are two studies by Mr. Butler of Columbus, Ohio. Ward, Delaney and Stewart are hard at work on landscapes. Miss Dodson has a portrait in progress. Mrs. Green of Chicago, and Mrs. Hoyte of Washington, are engaged on landscapes. Guernsey Mitchell, the young American sculptor, will have a group.

The ex-King and Queen of Naples will arrive here to-morrow for the winter and the ex-Queen Isabella of Spain will stay for Madrid in ten days.

A THEATRICAL FAILURE.

A play fashioned after "The Voyage en Bateau" of the Hanlon Brothers, has been produced at the Griegy. The music is by Varney. The play has proved a failure.

SUCCESSFUL CONCERTS.

The case was then given to the jury. It is anticipated that the verdict will be acquittal.

GEORGIA'S PROHIBITION ELECTION.

Both Sides Confident of Success—Estimates of the Vote.

Rabbi Sonneschein will speak to-morrow morning at Pickwick Hall on "The Family Sabbath."

The meeting for business men, from 12:30 to 1:15 p. m. daily, next week, will be conducted by Evangelist Yannan.

QUARANTINE REGULATIONS.

MONTREAL, November 26.—The Provincial Board of Health last evening adopted resolutions to be forwarded to Sir Charles Tupper, asking that in view of his intimate connection with the American authorities at the present time he should urge upon them the necessity of establishing uniform quarantine regulations for both countries. The resolution pointed out that Canada and the United States were connected to the same extent with the quarantine in question, and in view of the recent cholera epidemic in New York, they should mutually protect each other.

IN THE HANDS OF THE DEATH.

The Fate of Captain E. M. Vandewater, Who Killed Robert A. S. Steele.

The State having closed their case in the Marcellus murder trial in the Criminal Court last evening, the defense this morning opened their case. Only two witnesses were placed on the stand by the State. One was Dr. Green and the other the defendant himself. Dr. Green testified that on the day of the killing, January 11, he attended the defendant at the Police Station and dressed his injuries. Marcellus had a lump on his head, a black and blue spot on his right eye, and several scratches and bruises about the face.

THE DEFENDANT'S STORY.

The defense was made especially prominent by Dr. Green, who came along to the trial. Rev. E. O. Osborne of Boston, whose figure was slim, face thin and eyes deep-set, the whole appearance of a fighter, thick muscular neck running up to a cut, a deep chin and behind the ears, a certain sombreness of appearance stood around either with valises in their hands or reaching out to take from them other items similarly attired, wearing besides certain travel stains which marked them as the "arrivals." The others were representatives of the Episcopal party, who had assembled to represent the visiting missionaries who are to conduct the Advent missions in the Diocese of New York, beginning to-morrow.

Those who arrived on the train made a good impression, and the people were strongly in favor of them.

THE FIFTH NATIONAL.

Creeceline Begins a Trusteehip—Preparing to Bring Suits.

Rev. C. H. Stephens had another interview last evening with Creeceline, the cashier of the defunct Fifth National Bank. Creeceline was accompanied by his attorney this time. He did not seem inclined to talk about his indictment and the Receiver did not question him on the subject. He was very willing to give all the information that he could to help the Receiver in disposing of the bank's affairs, and said he would lay his hands on anything that was wanted that the bank's affairs were all clear. His head and hands were known where to look for everything.

The Receiver said he would call on him if he needed any particular information.

With Vandewater was Rev. Mayhew of Brooklyn, who came along to the trial. Rev. E. O. Osborne of Boston, whose figure was slim, face thin and eyes deep-set, the whole appearance of a fighter, thick muscular neck running up to a cut, a deep chin and behind the ears, a certain sombreness of appearance stood around either with valises in their hands or reaching out to take from them other items similarly attired, wearing besides certain travel stains which marked them as the "arrivals." ## ON A MISSION FOR PA.

The Object of George Gould's Western Trip—An Interesting Interview.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, November 25.—Geo. Gould, accompanied by his wife, left for San Francisco Thursday night. His brother said that this trip was taken solely with the view of inspecting the different properties with which George was connected, including the Pacific Mail, to the presidency of which he was recently elected. Mr. Wall Street, however, gave a different construction to this trip and said that it was taken with a view of bringing about the settlement of the cable difficulty. Jay Gould is in Europe, where he has been in quiet retirement, the English cable being the only place where he has conferences with leading telegraph people. James Gordon Bennett is also there, but his partner, Mr. Marshall, is said to be in New York. Mr. Gould is in daily communication with his son and many believe that the latter has gone to San Francisco to help him to get the company to try to end the cable war, either by the purchase of the Commercial Cable Company or by making a strong argument.

A Hopeful Outlook.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.
PITTSBURG, Pa., November 26.—Geo. Gould arrived here yesterday morning in his special car en route for the West. While his car was in the Union Station awaiting the departure of the St. Louis train, he conversed on financial and railroad matters. The business outlook throughout the country is said to be good.

"It is in the most healthy condition imaginable. As for the money market, it's said to be the Administration's best year since 1865. I do not desire, and I see no reason for doubting that it will continue so. The outlook is favorable to the railroads, and the market. Money will not be too easy, and indeed times are better when it is not. A good demand at a fair rate of interest always indicates prosperity, and the country's prosperity.

While the reverse is argued when the demand is light, when President Grant and his supporters are in power, it is well to remember that the administration was set everywhere regarding the prospective policy of his administration. This feeling of uncertainty has long been disastrous, however, and it is evident now that the confidence of bankers, business men and financiers everywhere, irrespective of party, at least now, is not so great as it was.

Speaking of the railroads Mr. Gould said that the railroads are in a position to benefit from the general prosperity. "On the other hand, he said, "there is an excellent opportunity for the administration to do a great deal for the railroads."

In the meantime Manager Schneidt had been sent to St. Louis to close the deal. He reached there yesterday morning. His expenses, the fact that we are adding to our equipment constantly, it appears an absolute impossibility to relieve the scarcity of cars. How do I propose to do this? Oh, as a measure that is mutually beneficial, and to the railroads corporations, and to the public.

He believes that its provisions are being universally complied with. I am now going to St. Louis to make a tour of the Missouri Pacific, he said, "we have more business to do there than any other place. We are building bridges and making the roads more comfortable. In the meantime Manager Schneidt has come to terms with Von der Ahe. He has received no answer from the latter.

During the day President Stern had himself driven to secure an audience with Von der Ahe via the telegraph, but all in vain. The Northern Pacific, and many other brother roads are looking after his interests. I know little about telegraph matters, but from what I can hear, the new combination in the Western division is working satisfactorily to all concerned."

AN IMPORTANT SOCIAL EVENT.

The Marriage of Nellie Cooke, a Defeated
Candidate for office.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WALCOTT, N. Y., November 26.—The most important social event that ever occurred in the northern part of Wayne County was the marriage of Nellie L. Cooke to W. H. Coon, an active young lawyer and Republican here. The romance attached to this marriage is familiar to the reading public. Mrs. Coon was the recent Democratic candidate for Sheriff of Wayne County, and was defeated by a greatly popular majority in a strong Republican district. Her canvas was the most remarkable ever known in this part of the State. Mr. Coon, a young lawyer and manager, and although a staunch Republican, he gave up his law practice for a month to help his wife in her canvass. The day passed their engagement was announced.

The wedding was celebrated last evening. About one hundred guests were invited, and among them were members of the Democratic County Committee and others who had labored for her during her canvass; old Democratic friends who had supported her recent canvass and her calls on them, and who were surprised at what an energetic young woman she was.

The young bride had a barrel of eggs, great pumpkins, flour, onions, honey, ducks and chickens, etc., sent to the bride by friends, to give up old ties. Old Deacon Pitts, who swore he would never vote for any woman for office, was one of the most zealous supporters.

Mr. Coon, sent a large barrel of cider for Nellie and had it put in her house. He, too, urged her to start her canvass.

The Democratic County Committee presented her with a handsome silver service, accompanied by a letter congratulating her on her success, and the friends of the candidate presented her with a box of chocolates on her first political campaign.

After Pastor Clark had finished the marriage ceremony, the bride and groom were admitted to kiss the pretty bride, a collation was served and Mr. and Mrs. Coon were driven to their home, where they were given a warm welcome.

Mr. Coon and bride have gone on to New York City and Boston. It is the general opinion throughout the country that Nellie has done well, and will be a success in her new home, for she is a good woman, and Mr. Coon's estimate, and which is thought to be an enormous sum to be spent in a cause for a local office.

Human Society Work.

The agents and members of the Human Society discovered 16 cases of driving gored and lamed animals during the week ending yesterday. Eight animals were taken from drivers; they were killed, being unable to use them. The cases of animals of various kinds, which were sheltered are reported, but no statement is made of what action was taken toward prosecuting the offenders. It is well known that the law is strict, and that a large number of crusaders are discovered, but no record is given of any attempt to punish remissives or owners for misusing animals.

The Star Pitcher Holds Out for $25,000 Salary
With Yale on a Flea of Unfairness in the Ball Clips and Chips.

President Von der Ahe of the St. Louis Base Ball Club arrived in the city last night, having stolen a march on the parties who were trying to buy Caruthers, the pitcher. It was thought that the deal would be completed this morning, but though Caruthers waited all morning at the Laclede Hotel, nobody came to see him, to buy him, or to sell him.
Brooklyn's offer to him is $4,000, and Caruthers wants $5,000, and says he will wait until the 10th, when he will go to Chicago.

He received a telegram from his mother telling him to sign with no one under any circumstances, and this was supplemented by a letter repeating the caution. Caruthers says that $5,000 for six months' work is a good deal of money and he would be likely to sign a contract with any one for that salary. Indeed, he began to day to count up the strength of the Brooklynites and speculate upon their chances for capturing the pennant
next year with himself and Terry as pitchers.
Caruthers has now no doubt that he will go to Brooklyn.

the Pitcher.

The Cincinnati Enquirer, speaking of the

as Von der Ahe was free to confess to him that he would not let Cincinnati have him, as she was not the place he wanted to go to." The pitcher will have a racing team next season.
